

ALL WILL BE HELD.
One Alien Passenger Sufficient to Detain a Vessel.
The Indignation of the Steamship Agents Increasing.
They Do Not Understand the Action of the Government.

There is increasing indignation among shipping men at the detention of incoming steamships under the quarantine proclamation of the President of Sept. 1, the reason for which, they say, has ceased to exist.

This proclamation, while the cholera scare was at its height, was designed to relate to only such ships as came from infected ports or carried stowaway passengers. But since Nov. 3, last an interpretation has been placed upon the proclamation which has the effect of detaining all vessels, even though they carry only first-class passengers, if any one of these passengers is an alien visiting America for the first time.

The White Star liner Britannic was accordingly held Saturday for six hours, when she was released on a despatch from the Treasury Department in Washington on the ground that evidence had been furnished that the passengers on the Britannic had all been booked before Sept. 1, the date of issuing the proclamation.

This was the reason given in a despatch signed by Acting Secretary of the Treasury, William C. Clegg, who reported to the White Star line's office.

"Would you show me the evidence that the passengers were booked before, Sept. 1?" the reporter asked.

"Well," was the reply, "we have none, nor can we produce any, nor had we assigned or urged any such reason to the Government for the release of our vessel."

"Then the reason given by the Government is unfounded?"

"Well, as we are a foreign corporation we should not like to criticize the action of the United States Government."

Special Deputy Collector Clegg, who is next in authority to Collector Hendricks, said to an Evening World reporter:

"The White Star line were told the North German Lloyd Company which, I am told, brought over a lot of stowaway passengers looking for employment as seamen."

"This happened on the steamer, which arrived here Oct. 27, last, and after landing sixty of these passengers in New York, proceeded on her way to Baltimore, where she landed ninety-four more."

Agent Clegg, when told what Mr. Clegg had said, said:

"Such a charge from whatever source it came is an insult to this company. It is not our business to take in and hold and release a company to make its reputation at this late date upon such a charge."

"Any way," added Mr. Clegg, "this whole detention business is an outrage and direct violation of the law."

At this point Mr. Clegg produced a pamphlet containing an "Act to regulate the carriage of passengers by sea," which was passed Aug. 17, 1902, and which, according to Mr. Clegg, has not since been repealed.

One clause in this act is to "prevent the admission of immigrants to the United States who are afflicted with cholera, typhoid fever, or other contagious diseases."

He said the steamship agents would not, at the caprice of the government, go to the expense of bringing and sending longshoremen down the line to detain and pick out the American passengers, their baggage and a part of the cargo.

At the White Star Company's office it was said that the detention, which is due Wednesday, would be passed without trouble, as the company had made some sort of arrangement with the government to that effect. What that arrangement is the officials at the agents' office refused to say.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Acting Secretary Clegg today told the Collector of Customs at New York as follows:

"If you shall be satisfied that immigrants by steamer have not been admitted to the United States by permit, entry of vessel, or otherwise, you may refuse to admit them."

DIDN'T ESCAPE FROM SIBERIA.

But Greenburg Got $1,745 for a Bag of Spurious Gold Dust.

He Acknowledges Playing the Trick in This City.

Solomon Greenburg was arraigned in the Tombs Police court this morning, charged with having swindled Max Goldberg, a Pittsburgh junk dealer out of $1,745 by means of the gold-dust scheme.

According to the Pittsburgh police about two weeks ago two men were introduced to Junk Dealer Goldberg by a man frequently employed by him. One of the men was represented as an escaped convict from Siberia, who stole five pounds of gold dust, fled to this country, became stranded and would sell as a sacrifice.

Goldberg listened to the proposition, took a sample of the stuff to a refiner, who told him the dust was 18 carat fine, and that he himself would be glad to purchase five pounds at the price asked for it.

Goldberg was so highly elated at what he considered a big bargain that he bought the bag of dust for $1,745, on which, if pure gold, he could have made a profit of about $500.

It didn't take long for him to discover the swindle, but the men and money had gone. The alleged convict called himself Samuel Schwartzman.

Detectives Jacobs and Dunn remembered a similar case successfully worked in November of last year upon jeweler Sigmund Greenbaum, in Grand street, near Suffolk, who bought $3,100 worth of spurious gold dust.

From the descriptions given of the two Pittsburgh swindlers the detectives thought one was the same man who swindled Greenbaum and made a haul of his hauls.

They knew that this man, who proves to be the prisoner Greenburg, was found in a woman known as Emily Goldstein, and the two were found together in the cafe at Stanton and Christie streets early yesterday morning.

Greenburg was taken before Inspector McLaughlin, and has been identified by both Greenbaum and Goldstein as his victim.

He denied all knowledge of the Pittsburgh transaction, but, according to Detective Dunn, he admitted that he was a woman, but said he has since had a settlement with him. This Greenbaum denies.

After the Greenbaum swindling Greenburg fled to Canada. He gives his address as 175 Christie street.

INVITED HIM TO SHOOT.
The Story of the Killing of Young John Andrews.

CANTON, N. J., Nov. 7.—The inquest into the death of young John Andrews, the eleven-year-old boy who was shot and killed by Charles Jordan, a companion, while playing with a revolver on the commons here yesterday afternoon, will be held late this afternoon.

So far there seems to have been no motive for the shooting. The unfortunate lad, it appears, held his gun over his head and asked Jordan if he could hit it. The boy tried and the bullet went through Andrews' killing him instantly.

Jordan, denied having shot his companion who arrested and declared that a big man with whiskers fired the shot and then escaped to the woods.

Young Jordan is in the lockup, where he was committed to await the inquest.

MARRIED FOR THE FEE.
Emil Grosshauer's Reasons for Asking to Be Divorced.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 7.—Emil Grosshauer, eighteen years old, through counsel has made application for a divorce from his seventeen-year-old wife Amelia, to whom he was married March 8 last by Justice Sumner in his office on Market street.

Young Grosshauer seeks a separation on the ground that the marriage was forced on himself and wife by Justice Sumner and himself who, it is claimed, collected $50 for the job of uniting them in matrimony.

Mr. Grosshauer, it appears, had Emil arrested for refusing her, but she was unwilling to marry at the time.

He is now alleged to have refused to admit that he had collected the fee, and that the marriage was forced on him.

Justice Sumner, it is claimed, had Emil arrested for refusing her, but she was unwilling to marry at the time.

MISTAKEN FOR A BURGLAR.

Benjamin Barstow Shot Dead by Farmer Albert May.

The little village of Ramsey, N. J., is in a state of excitement over the killing of Benjamin Barstow, who was shot dead late Saturday night by Albert May, who thought that he was a burglar.

Barstow's death was due to a series of mistakes. Saturday afternoon he, with his brother, Edward Barstow, went to Ramsey's farm to make some purchases leaving his brother outside the store.

In some way Benjamin missed Edward in the crowd gathered about the front of the store, and thinking that his brother had gone home alone, Benjamin started for the farm house alone. He had only been there once before, and trudged off up the road one way, just the opposite direction from the one he should have taken.

Farmer May's house is very similar to that owned by Edward Barstow, and Benjamin, mistaking it for his brother's home, tried the front door. Finding it locked and not being successful in waking anybody up he burst in the door and entered the door.

As he was entering the front door, May came downstairs, and, finding a stranger in his parlor, ordered him out. Barstow, still under the impression that he was in his brother's house, repeated what he thought was a threat to May's life, and when May turned him out, he fled with all his speed.

Barstow went back into the house and got a bag of money, and then tried to get out. As he was running he was trying to get out the house when he was charged by May, who shot him dead.

Barstow died at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.
